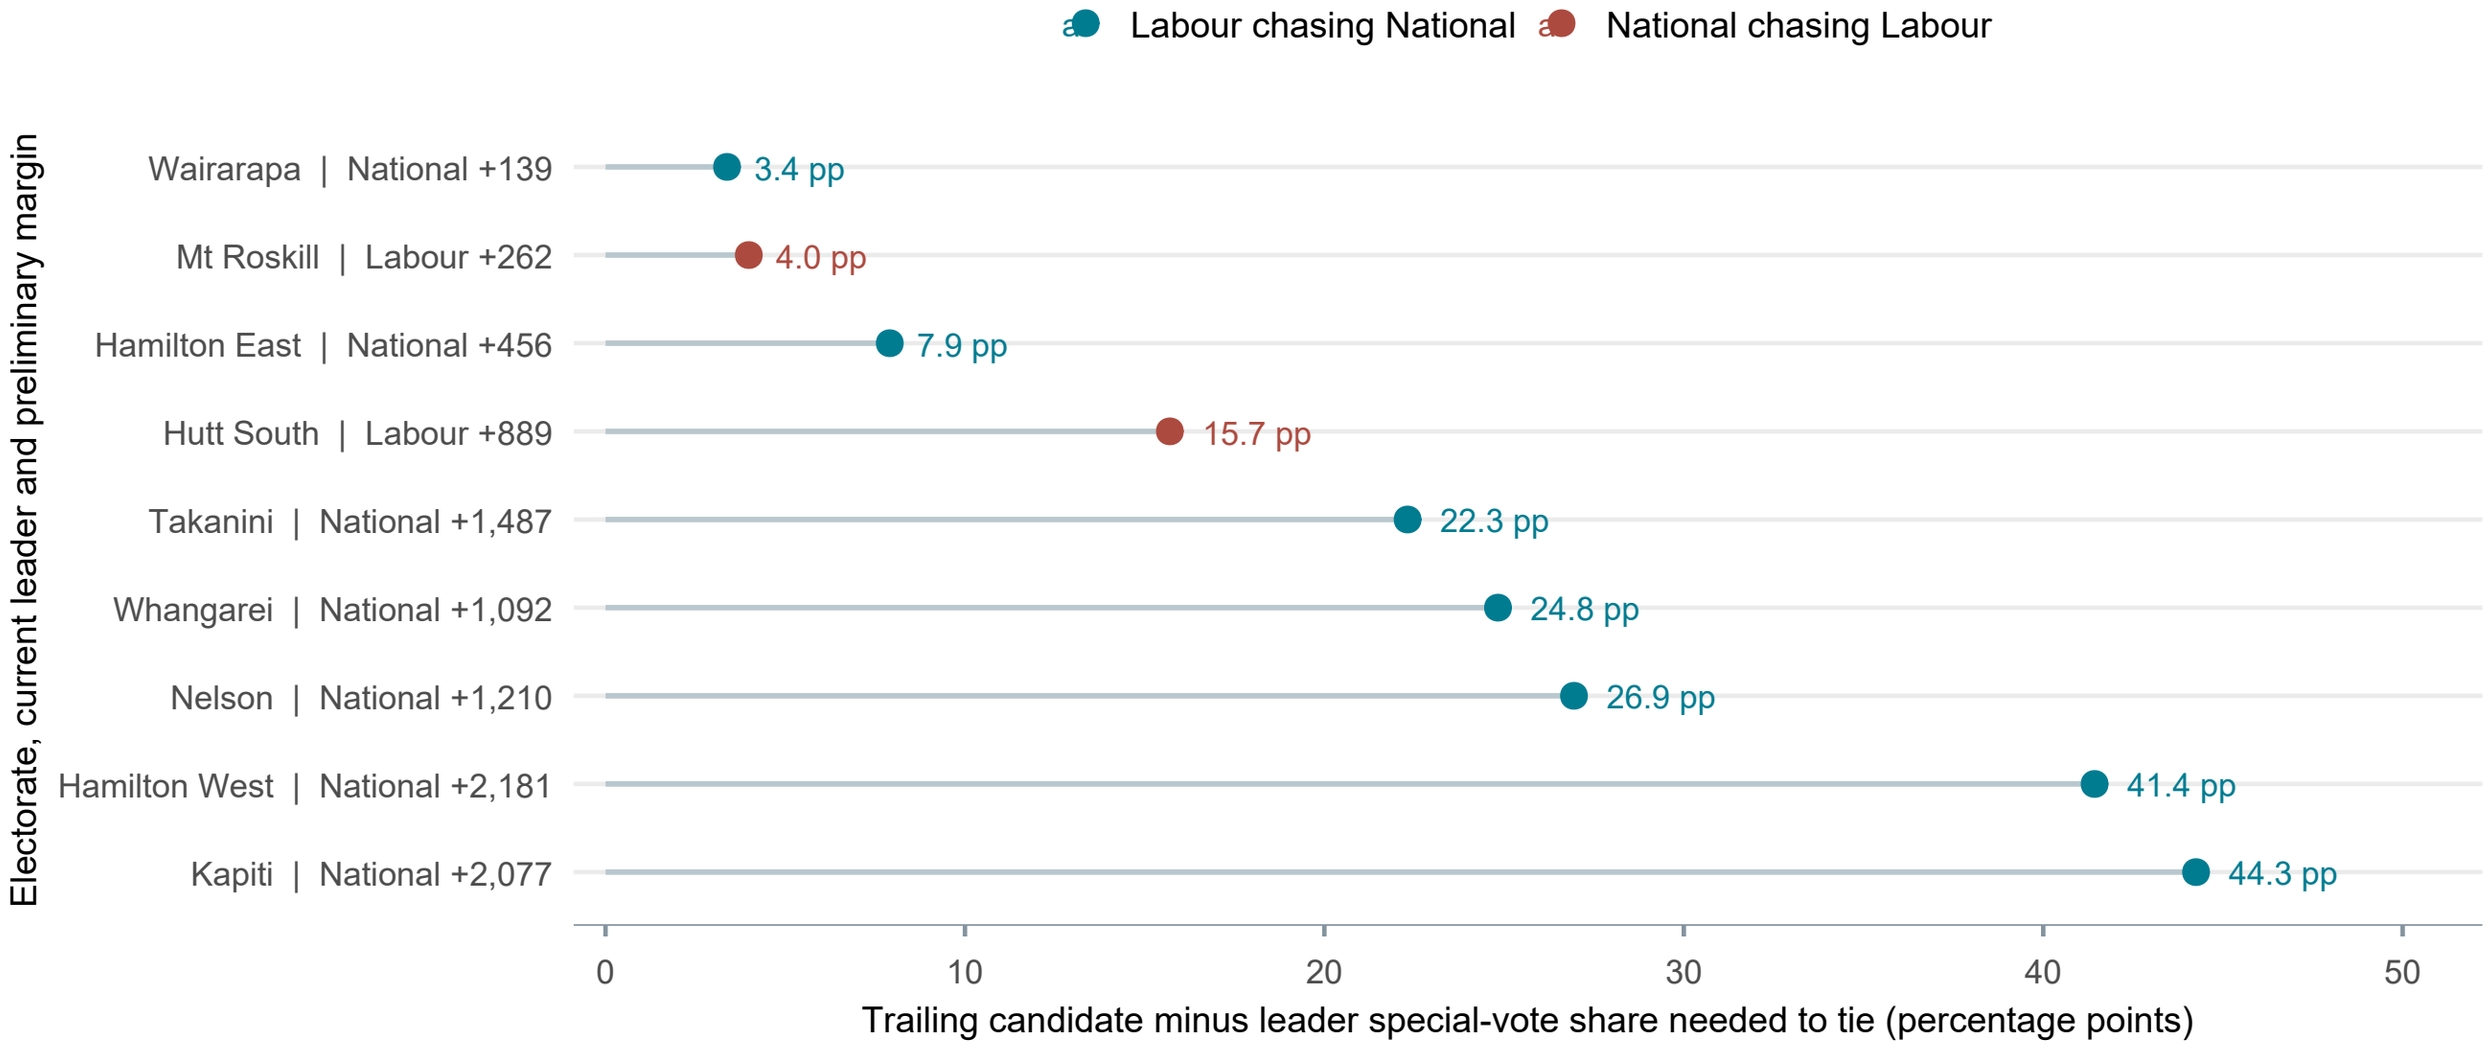
National could also gain seats on special votes

Net National losses matter for the House: gains in Labour-held seats would offset losses elsewhere



Source: Electoral Commission preliminary counts and 2023 turnout table; own historical-pattern volume benchmark.
National-Labour marginals within 2,200 votes. These are hurdles, not forecasts; smaller does not mean more likely.
Unadjusted predecessor electorates: Kapiti uses Otaki; Hutt South boundaries changed. Final party votes also matter.
